What is TUM tanzt!?

TUM tanzt! is an initiative of the TUM Center for Culture and Arts and the TUM School of Medicine and Health (Applied Sport Science) that celebrates dance in all its diversity. Through workshops, performances, discussions, and community projects, we create opportunities to move, learn, connect, and be creative together. TUM tanzt! invites people not only to experience dance as an audience, but also to get moving themselves, creating opportunities for connection, reflection, and artistic exchange.

What is the TUM tanzt! Performance Company?

The TUM tanzt! Performance Company is a student-led dance group that emerged from the TUM tanzt! Community Project Week. Members work together on choreographies, performances, and exchanges with other student dance groups. Students who would like to join are welcome to register via gymanstik.tanz.as@mh.tum.de.

Do I need to be a dancer to participate in the workshops?

Not at all! TUM tanzt! welcomes participants of all experience levels, from complete beginners to experienced dancers. Curiosity and a willingness to move are all you need.

Are all workshops, performances, and discussions free to attend?

Most TUM tanzt! events are free of charge. This includes the majority of workshops, performances, and discussions offered as part of the program. Some excursions or external performances may require a ticket, but discounted rates are usually available for students.

I am not studying at TUM. Can I still participate in TUM tanzt!?

Yes! Most workshops, performances, and discussions are open to everyone, including TUM students, staff, and members of the wider community who are interested in dance. If an event is exclusively for TUM students or staff, this will be clearly indicated in the event description.

How can I find out more about TUM tanzt! events?

You can sign up to our newsletter and follow us on Instagram to receive updates about upcoming events.